

A latter to the collector/ Excise Inspector / Suptd. Of police about Black Business of country wine leads to death and public irritation.

From

Prem Kumar Behera, President

OM Social Services Organization,

To

The Collector,

Ganjam District, Chhatarpur.

Hon'ble Sir,

Being a social worker, I think it would be appropriate to draw your kind attention to an on going bad system in the rural areas of Ganjam District, Now-a-days, the local wine mafias have become active and spread their network of supplying country wine to the rural areas in black. The police seems to have secret tie with them for wine through the licensed wine shops of the locality. As a result, public life is hampered. One person of Ranipeta, village died of drinking that kind of wine.

In addition, the most thought-provoking matter is that they are involving the unemployed young people as well as labour class people for which there might be a dreadful consequence in future.

So, I request you to take quick and appropriate step to control this kind of illegal and destructive work in the district.

Yours sincerely,

Prem Kumar Behera
